Framework for Critical Friends Interaction

Schedule 30 minutes for each of your critical friend team interactions. Record your session on the attached form.

You will have to schedule two sessions:

1) When your team presents your work/plans to your peers
2) When your team listens to and provides feedback to another group presenting their plans

The role of the critical friend team is to provide constructive feedback to help the presenting team to improve or enhance the work they have done or planned.

Critical friends work to a strict brief:

1) Listen without commenting
2) Provide specific feedback on identified/requested issues

Suggested roles across the critical friends questioning team:- participants can take more than one role, but one person must take each role as their primary task during the meeting.

Convenor
Leads the friend’s team, handles protocols; moves through business; checks for further questions

Timekeeper
Ensures necessary time is allocated to each part of the process

Moderator
Ensures the friends team adheres to the required practice
e.g. listening, questioning, only providing requested feedback

Questioner(s)
Asks questions

Before the meeting:

Presenting team

- Review your progress to date
- Work out how you will make the presentation
- Agree areas that you wish to ask for feedback

Areas for feedback might include:

- How well have you addressed the brief (scope and audience)
- How can you successfully meet the requirements/deadlines

Critical friends questioning team:

- Allocate team roles
- Familiarise yourself with the presenting team’s brief.
- Explore or consider areas of likely questions
- Agree a protocol for the exercise

How you can gain marks from this activity:

- Constructive feedback can help your team produce a higher quality resource.
- You are expected to include some account of your experience of this process (as presenting team and critical friend questioning team) in your personal reflection
