the history of mobile ice cream sellers

An ice cream van (British) or ice cream truck (American) is a commercial vehicle which serves as a travelling retail outlet for ice cream, usually during the summer. Ice cream vans are often seen parked at public events, or near parks, beaches, or other areas where people congregate. Ice cream vans often travel near where children play — outside schools, in residential areas, or in other locations. They usually stop briefly before moving on to the next street.

Ice cream vans are often brightly decorated and carry images of ice cream, or some other adornment, such as cartoon characters. They may have painted-on notices, which can serve a commercial purpose ("Stop me and buy one!") or a more serious one ("Don't Skid on a Kid!") - serving as a warning to passing motorists that children may run out into the road at the sight of the van, or appear without warning from behind it.

Reliable evidence proves that ice cream cones were served in the 19th century, and their popularity increased greatly during the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904. According to legend, at the World's Fair an ice cream seller had run out of the cardboard dishes used to put ice cream scoops in, so they could not sell any more produce. Next door to the ice cream booth was a Syrian waffle booth, unsuccessful due to intense heat; the waffle maker offered to make cones by rolling up his waffles and the new product sold well, and was widely copied by other vendors.

This beautiful Beegle bus is a 1971 Volkswagen camper-van imported from California and owned by Bella Clark, daughter-in-law of the iconic textile designer Cella Birtwell and tegendary fashion designer Ossie Clark

Bella was bitten by the VW bug at an early age. My father had a 1971 VW Danbury, so when I spotted this one for sale I needed no persuading. She was in fantastic condition when we purchased her. We were lucky, the previous owner had done a lot of the hard work, comments Bella.

After weighing up the pros and cons we installed a TV in place of the sink, this was partly due to the ungredictability of the Birtish weather and three this was partly due to the unpredictability of the British weather and three young children! New we lave going off camping for the weekend, whenever we want to and whatever the weather. Personal touches were added to this classic VW by making curtains, cushions and bunting from this Birtwell fabric. Using folding chairs and tables also in Birtwell fabric means that the style is continued both inside and out, a particularly useful device when dressing a small space.

Items that roll, fold flat or stack are essential when transporting furniture and ensuring that they look good, whether in use or put away adds to the visual classive of a small space. pleasure of a small space. Another example of Bella's attention to scale is the use of half-size bunking around the windows - the effect is the same but it is not overpowering.

A compound grid based on Gerstner's Capital Magazine

Introduction

This layout is designed using a recreation of Karl Gerstner's compound grid that was designed for Capital Magazine in the 1960's. It's a compound - meaning combined - grid of 6 column and 4 columns. This allows for very flexible layout combinations, including the unusual 5 column, asymmetric column configuration which is the basis for this layout.

This layout is designed using a recreation of Karl Gerstner's compound grid that was designed for Capital Magazine in the 1960's. It's a compound – meaning combined – grid of 6 column and 4 columns. This allows for very flexible layout combinations, including the unusual 5 column, asymmetric column configuration which is the basis for this layout.

After all, for many of the challenges we face in the web design world, they've already been there and done that. But while so many of these brands excel in print, a recent study suggests that many are struggling, even failing, to provide their readers with quality experiences online.

The research was commissioned by Monotype's Brand Perfect initiative earlier this year and looked at the top 100 online
